

Wanderers' big test

WYCOMBE Wanderers face a difficult visit to Croydon tomorrow (Saturday) in a Rothmans Isthmian League game that will test their recent run of victories to the full.

After Tuesday's win over Ilford, the Blues have moved to second place. Tomorrow they must prove that their recent goal spree can be maintained away from home following their seven goals in the last two matches at Loakes Park.

Manager John Reardon may make one change from the side, bringing in Steve Hill for Dylan Evans, who seems likely to be substitute. There is a slight doubt over Keith Mead who has a leg injury while Tony Horseman is definitely out, also with a leg injury.

Croydon will field most of the side that lost at Wycombe in December when Ian Pearson, Horseman and Mead scored in a 3-0 victory. The only change is the inclusion of winger Steve Delaney for Cliff Hall, who is out with cartilage trouble.

Croydon's most recent result was a welcome victory at Walthamstow in the League Cup on Monday. It ended a run of four consecutive away defeats against Enfield, Hendon, Staines and Hayes when they failed to score.

Wycombe, who have signed utility player Bill Roberts, have no game on Tuesday but travel to the winners of the Staines v Boreham Wood third round tie in the Rothmans Isthmian League Cup on Thursday evening.
